Paid Family Leave at a Glance

The Employment Development Department (EDD) is committed to helping Californians balance the demands of the workplace and family care needs at home. The Paid Family Leave (PFL) program, a component of State Disability Insurance (SDI), minimizes financial hardships and supports individuals when they need time off work to care for a loved one. This guide was developed to help you assist your customers when they need support for times like these.

What is Paid Family Leave (PFL)?

PFL is an insurance program administered by the EDD. It provides individuals a portion of their paycheck for up to six weeks when they need time off for one of the following:

- To care for a family member with a serious health condition.
- To bond with a new baby or child in the family (e.g., adoption or foster care).

Who pays for PFL?

PFL is funded by workers. Most workers who pay SDI taxes ("SDI" on their pay stub) are eligible for PFL.

How does PFL work?

Individuals are eligible for up to six weeks of PFL which can be taken all at once, or broken up during a 12-month period. But the leave must be used within a 12-month period.

Example:

Parents (individual, spouse, or registered domestic partner) may take four weeks of PFL when a baby is born, and later in the year, take another two weeks to help the baby transition to a new caregiver.

What is the PFL benefit amount?

PFL pays individuals about 55 percent of their weekly wage, up to a maximum cap.

Who can be cared for under PFL?

Individuals can provide care for their child, parent, parent-in-law, grandparent, grandchild, sibling, spouse, or registered domestic partner.

What is a “serious health condition”?

A “serious health condition” is an illness, injury, impairment, or physical or mental condition that requires:

- A stay in a hospital, hospice, or residential care facility.
- Continuing treatment by a doctor or other “health care professional”.

Does PFL provide job protection?

PFL does not provide job protection. Individuals should ask their human resources office first about job protection before using PFL.

Individuals may qualify for the leave programs below that provide job protection and can be taken concurrently with PFL.

- The Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA)
www.dol.gov/whd/fmla/
- The California Family Rights Act (CFRA)
www.dfeh.ca.gov/Publications\_CFRADefined.htm
- The Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA)
www.dfeh.ca.gov/Publications\_StatLaws\_PregDiscr.htm
The FEHA is not taken concurrently with PFL, but may provide job protection during leave for pregnancy disability, childbirth, or a related medical condition.

The EDD generally processes properly completed claims and issues payments within two weeks after receipt.

A properly completed claim for PFL bonding includes:

- Part A – Statement of Claimant, Part B – Bonding Certification, and supporting documentation or evidence of the relationship.

A properly completed claim for PFL care includes:

- Part A – Statement of Claimant, Care Recipient's Authorization for Disclosure of Personal-Health Information, Part C – Statement of Care Recipient, and Part D – Doctor's Certification.

The first seven days of a claim are a non-payable waiting period, except for new mothers transitioning from a Disability Insurance (DI) pregnancy claim to a PFL bonding claim. If the claimant meets all eligibility requirements, benefits are authorized and paid via the EDD Debit Card<sup>SM</sup>.

Relationship between PFL and DI Benefits

Some customers who receive DI benefits due to a non-work-related injury, illness, pregnancy, or childbirth, may be eligible or have a family member that may be eligible for PFL benefits. For example:

A mother receiving DI benefits due to pregnancy or childbirth may transition from her DI claim to PFL for bonding. If this is the case, she will automatically be sent a Claim for Paid Family Leave (PFL) Benefits—New Mother, (DE 2501FP), when her pregnancy-related DI claim ends. There is no additional seven-day waiting period for a PFL claim to bond with a newborn when the PFL claim follows the DI pregnancy-related claim. Their spouse or domestic partner may also be eligible to receive PFL benefits for bonding with the new child within 12 months of the birth.

Or, an individual receiving DI benefits may require care due to their disability, and their family member may be eligible to receive PFL benefits to take time to provide that care.
