Work Sharing Program

As a temporary alternative to layoffs, the Employment Development Department’s (EDD) Work Sharing program allows the payment of a prorated percentage of Unemployment Insurance (UI) benefits to workers whose hours and wages are reduced.

The Advantages of Work Sharing.

The Work Sharing program can meet employers’ needs due to its built-in flexibility:

- Minimizes or eliminates the need for layoffs and the accompanying hardships for employees.
- Enables a business to retain trained employees and avoid the expense of recruiting, hiring, and training new employees.
- Enables employees to be retained during a temporary slowdown so employers can quickly gear-up when business conditions improve.
- Assists employers who need to reduce their work force permanently to use Work Sharing as a phased transition to layoff.
- Allows affected employees to continue to work at reduced levels with an opportunity to find other employment before an expected layoff.
- Treats employees more equitably than layoffs, which place the burden of economic adjustments for an entire business on relatively few employees.
- Allows almost all types of business or industry to use the Work Sharing program.

Who can participate?

Employers with a reduction in production, services, or other conditions who are looking for an alternative to layoffs may participate in the Work Sharing program.

Specific requirements include:

- A minimum of two employees, comprising at least 10 percent of the employer’s regular workforce or a unit of the workforce, must be affected by a reduction in wages and hours worked.
- The reduction in wages and hours worked also must be at least 10 percent.
